Do you want to how to analyze people, speed read any type of personality, persuade and influence human behavior through body language, dark psychology tricks & mind control techniques.? If yes, then keep reading... Body language is the nonverbal signals that we send through our gestures. In simple words, it is about communication through our bodies. It includes our hand movements and facial expressions to as little things as our pupils. If we observe closely, we will see that people tend to give away a great volume of information through nonverbal signals. The key to reading nonverbal signs accurately is to take these signals and study them as a group. Persuasion is a theme of dark psychology that can be said to share quite a bit of similarity to manipulation. This is because they are both deployed in order to influence the motivations, behaviors, attitudes, and beliefs of a particular victim. There are a number of reasons why we adopt persuasion into our everyday lives, but the main one would have to be to get people with different ideas on the same page. In company, for instance, the persuasion method will be used to alter the attitude of a person towards an item, concept, or a particular event that is taking place. Either written or spoken phrases will be used during the process to express the other person's thinking, emotions, or data. Another common instance you can use persuasion is to fulfil a private benefit. This would include either advocacy for trial when providing a pitch for sales or during an election campaign. Although none of these are deemed to be good or evil, they are still used to affect the listener to behave or believe in some manner. One understanding of persuasion is that it utilizes one's private or positional resources to alter other people's attitudes or behaviors. There are also several distinct kinds of persuasion recognized. The process of altering views and attitudes by appealing to feelings or practices is known as heuristic persuasion. This book covers the following topics: What is persuasion Human behavior What we can get from the power of persuasion Advanced persuasion techniques How to resist persuasion Mind control and dark psychology Speed reading people Influencing people Hypnosis Types of persuasion Self-persuasion Techniques to influence human behavior Honing your persuasion skills Methods of persuasion What is dark persuasion and how is it different from regular persuasion? What is Body Language Interpreting Body Language Personality Types Deception and Lies Reading the eyes How to show dominance through body language ...And much more Persuasion is a type of mind control that is constantly being used in society. You may attempt to convince them to believe the same way you do when you speak to someone about politics. You are persuaded to vote a certain way when you listen to a political campaign. There's a lot of persuasion going on when someone is attempting to sell you a fresh item. This form of mind control is so prevalent that most people don't even know it's happening at all to them. The problem will arise when someone takes the time to convince you to believe ideals and values that do not suit your own value system. There are many distinct types of persuasion available. Not all of them have a bad intention, but they will all work to get the subject to change their minds about something. When a political candidate arrives on television, on Election Day they try to get the topic, or the voter, to vote on the ballot a certain way. Ready to get started? Click "Buy Now"!

A people analyzer or reader can quickly decipher an individual's personality through several attributes, including what he or she does in their spare time. For example, if you inquire what a person does in their spare time and they reveal they participate in community drives, volunteering activities or contribute to church initiatives, you know they are philanthropic, magnanimous or community conscious. Similarly, if a person says they love partying endlessly or watching television in their free time, they may be low on ambition or seek quick gratification. The point is, even something as seemingly trivial as what a person does in his or her spare time can reveal his or her personality. How Psychology Improves Our Lives While certain psychologists are of the opinion that our behavior is directly determined by genetics or heredity, others believe that it is a summation of all our experiences since birth. They are of the opinion that our immediate environment or the experiences we undergo in our immediate environment mold our behavior. For example, if a person experiences constant marginalization or prejudice on account of their class or race, they may grow up to despise wealth or seemingly superior races. They may empathize with the oppressed. Similarly, if a person is constantly bullied, abused or victimized as a child, he or she may grow up to be a bully themselves. Much of their outlook, values, personality and attitude will be shaped by these early childhood experiences or violence and abuse. Have you ever observed people who keenly attempt read their personality through zodiac signs or astrology? Isn't this a sign of possessing low self-awareness or understanding? People often gravitate towards things they believe they haven't got much of. For example, someone who hasn't been given sufficient attention by their parents during early childhood or teen years may grow up to be a person who thrives on drama and attention-seeking tactics. They may become more dramatic and showy. There are plenty of clues everywhere. As a people analyzer, you just need to keep an eye out for these subtle clues. Basic Psychological Concepts Our mind is divided into three layers - the conscious mind, subconscious mind and unconscious mind. While the conscious mind or state of consciousness is awareness of thoughts, actions, learning and experiences, the subconscious and unconscious mind are realms of the mind that hold things we may not be aware of. Through the conscious mind, we have awareness of things we perceive and feel. We can process feelings, thoughts, concepts and ideas that are gathered from our immediate environment. It only takes about seven seconds for the look on their faces to determine someone's mood. Body language is considered louder than talking directly. Many people can sense what mood you are in without even saying a word unless you are very good at hiding it. The movement of your body gives away how you feel, whether it's angry, sad, happy, etc. Your ultimate aim in relationships should be to be able to communicate appropriately. If your partner doesn't understand how you feel, not expressing yourself rightly can cause a lot of problems. Human beings must be able to express reasoning, solutions, and conclusions in ways that the listener is interested in or otherwise have no meaning. People have used body language since ancient times. Human beings would use body language before words existed to interact and articulate their needs and desires. It was the only way to communicate with others. We knew terror, hunger, affection, rage, and joy by instinct. The body would show them through our faces, hands, and legs to express these feelings. To decide how someone feels, body language is almost always required. If you've spoken on the phone to a friend or a loved one, you may have noticed that sometimes it's hard to tell if they're serious about something, joking or even angry. This misunderstanding is the result of a lack of a visual language of the body. Your actions reveal more of what most people realize about you. If you know it or not, body language is an enormous variable that is responsible for how everyone you encounter comes to your mind. Listening skills are a must and essential for creating good customer relationships in many professions-particularly in professions where you help others. Whether you help people maintain their relationships, guide people for business success, or advise people on any other kind of issue, they see your body language, showing excellent listening skills makes people more comfortable. Your ability to read someone is not always about what you can see. At times, it is also about what you feel when you are around them. Trust in your gut feeling. Many people ignore this. Gut feelings are a primal instinct that protects you from something or someone you are not comfortable with. When speaking to a liar, they might spin tales that have you wondering whether they are true or not. If you have a shred of doubt about it, it is highly likely you are right about them. Identifying the different types of liars is another important technique that will save you a lot of trouble. Proximity to a sociopath is dangerous. They are unlike other liars you might come across. They feel nothing and show no remorse. They will never apologize and may actually enjoy your suffering from their lies, and they even goad you while at it. This is a dangerous person to be around. On the other hand, pathological and compulsive liars spin make-believe tales to suit their needs. The best way to go about life is to be open to possibilities. Not all possibilities might be amazing, but in human interaction, it is always safe to expect the unexpected. Considering the different types of liars out there, you have to protect your space. Recognize that some people are beyond help, but suggest professional help for those who can benefit from it. It is painful when you have to distance yourself from people you love because you cannot trust them to tell you the truth. This book gives a comprehensive guide on the following: It all starts with the brain Analyzing and deciphering behavioral patterns Advantage of analyzing a person in professional and private life Type communication
